

Prologue

'Adda', in Bengali, signifies the pointless and meaningless debates and discussions enjoyed by friends without expecting an outcome. It celebrates friendship and an opportunity to experience life outside our digital identities.

At Adda Hut we aim to celebrate this sense of togetherness over a traditional meal originating from the streets of Kolkata.

Also known as the 'City of Joy', Kolkata is the heritage and cultural capital of India. It offers a cuisine with unparalleled taste – mild and bursting with flavour. Some of the dishes date back to the 16th Century and have been influenced by cultures across the globe – Portuguese, French, Central Asian and the British.

The menu has been carefully selected with delicacies that deviate from the stereotyped 'Indian curry'. So when you walk in through the doors of Adda Hut, it is advisable to keep the guilty-feeling- diet-conscious mind waiting outside and savour the food.

Bon Appétit.
